Teachers matter more to student achievement than any other aspect of schooling

The average teacher impacts 3,000 students in their career

One great teacher in elementary school can shift lifetime income for an entire classroom by hundreds of thousands of dollars

STORY OF IMPACT: First-Gen Future Teacher

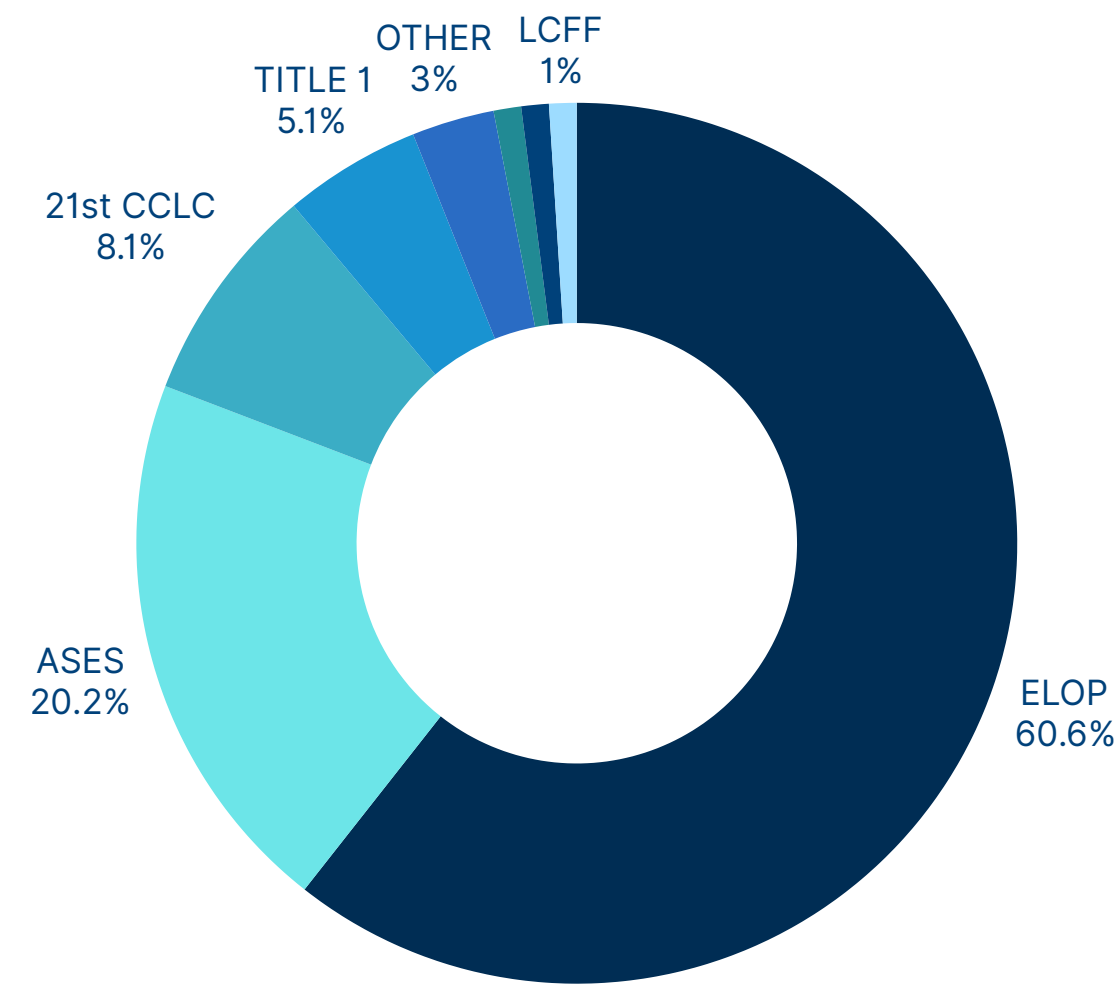

Teaching Fellow, Emely Valenzuela, proudly wears her CTFF first-generation graduation stole with her sights set on leading a classroom one day. When she first joined CTFF, she was a marketing major, but once she found her place in the classroom, she found her passion.

When she was a student in elementary and middle school, Emely attended an after school program herself. As a college student, she discovered through CTFF, that working in an after school program would lead her to find her true passion.

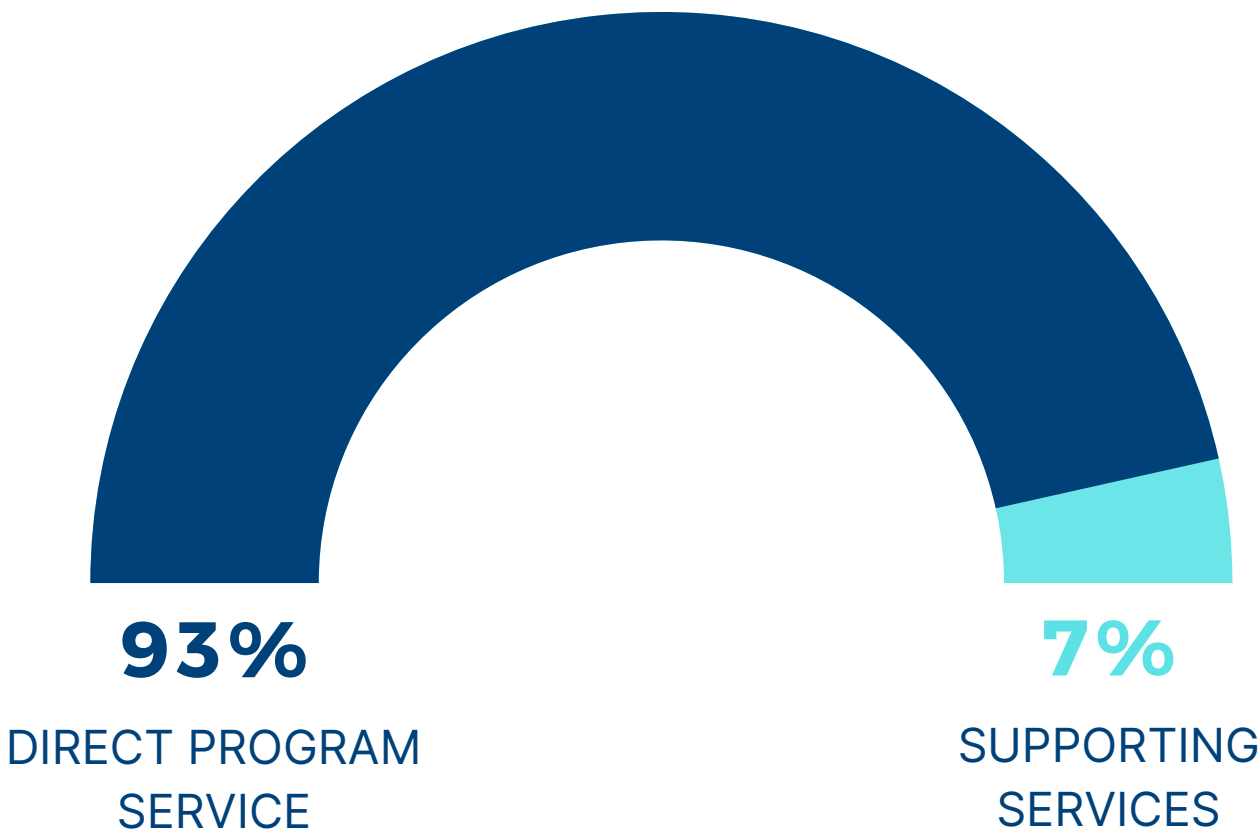

“I received a letter from one of my students. They said that I impacted her life. That’s when I knew it. This is what I’m meant to do!” said Emely.

Emely has joined CTFF’s internship program and First-Gen College Student Program, where she has participated in tailored financial workshops, Life Coaching, and gained new perspectives from her fellow first-gen Teaching Fellows. Emely said, “This program reassured me that I’m on the right path.” Emely is now working toward her final semester in college and preparing to enter the credential program.
